Appeal from the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida

---

(April 21, 2004)

Before BIRCH, DUBINA and CARNES, Circuit Judges.

PER CURIAM:

Gregory Lawrence appeals his sentence of 24 months' imprisonment imposed for violating the conditions of his supervised release. Lawrence argues that the district court abused its discretion in exceeding the sentencing range recommended in Chapter 7 of the Sentencing Guidelines. We affirm.

The district court's decision to exceed the sentencing range recommended in Chapter 7 of the Sentencing Guidelines is reviewed for abuse of discretion. United States v. Wiggins, 220 F.3d 1248, 1249 (11th Cir. 2000). The district court may revoke a term of supervised release and impose a sentence after considering certain factors set forth in 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a), including "the nature and circumstances of the offense and the history and character of the defendant." 18 U.S.C. §§ 3553(a)(1), 3583(e)(3); see also United States v. Brown, 224 F.3d 1237, 1240-41 (11th Cir. 2000). Additionally, the district court must consider, but is not bound by, the policy statements of Chapter 7 of the Sentencing Guidelines in imposing a sentence upon the revocation of supervised release. Brown, 224 F.3d at 1242. Accordingly, so long as the district court considered the Chapter 7 policy statements before imposing a sentence outside of the Chapter 7 recommended range, the sentence will be upheld. See United States v. Hofierka, 83 F.3d 357, 361-62 (11th Cir. 1996); see also United States v. Aguillard, 217 F.3d 1319, 1320

(11th Cir. 2000).

Because the district court considered the sentencing range recommended in Chapter 7, but rejected it after properly considering the relevant factors set forth in § 3553(a), the court did not abuse its discretion in sentencing Lawrence.
